The Korea TESOL International Conference

Seoul, Korea 2018/08/27

There are only a few weeks left to save money by pre-registering for the 2018 Korea TESOL International Conference. Hosted by Sookmyung Women's University, the Korea TESOL International Conference, Oct. 13-14, 2018, attracts scholars, educators, and teachers from around the world.

The theme of this year's conference is "Focus on Fluency." The conference chair Kathleen Kelley hopes that she and other teachers will leave the conference with a better understanding of how they can promote English language fluency in their classrooms.

The conference will feature an impressive line-up of invited speakers. With plenary sessions from the Steven Krashen, a world-renowned applied linguist, author, and polyglot; and Scott Thornbury, English language teaching authority, author of An A to Z of ELT, and the popular blog of the same name. Other notable speakers include Jill Hadfield, well known for her books of classroom activities; and Kim Ki Hun, one of Korea's millionaire English teachers, once featured on CNN. In addition to the invited sessions, there will also be close to 200 concurrent sessions by passionate teachers and researchers on a wide array of topics related to teaching English in Korea.

Attendees may register at the venue on conference weekend, but to save time and money, pre-registering is recommended. Pre-registration is open through September 30, and those who pre-register will save 10,000 won, more if they register as a group.

Please visit koreatesol.org/ic2018 to pre-register, or learn more about the conference and its invited speakers.
